Professional Licensure and Certification Disclosure Requirements

Institutions are required to provide general disclosures for educational programs, regardless of modality, that prepare students for professional licensure. The required information relates to whether or not the educational program meets the requirements for professional licensure in all 50 states. Where applicable, an institution must also indicate when such a determination cannot be made.

Professional licensure and certification requirements may vary state to state. This information is also subject to change. Students should contact the appropriate licensing agency for his or her home state to obtain the most up to date information.

Additionally, most state licensing boards require that U.S. medical schools granting the MD degree be accredited by the Liaison Committee for Medical Education (LCME) as a condition of licensure of the school's graduates. U.S. medical schools also must have LCME accreditation to ensure that their students can take the United States Medical Licensing Examination (USMLE). Graduates of LCME-accredited schools are eligible for residency programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME).

The MD Program at WMed is accredited by the LCME and thereby does meet the academic requirements for licensure in all 50 states. For further information please visit: <https://lcme.org>.

Using the last date of attendance, the Office of Financial Aid calculates "earned" versus "unearned" federal aid according to a federally mandated formula that is based on the percentage of the term/semester completed. The Office of Financial Aid notifies students by email of the results of a Return of Title IV Aid calculation.
